

Roanoke County's population is 91% White.

Source: 2005-2007 American Community Survey

Roanoke County is largely a White community, where only 9% percent of the population identifies themselves with another race, or more than one race. Five percent of the population is Black or African American, while the other 4% constitutes American Indians or Alaska Natives, Asians or Pacific Islanders, and those of other or multiple races. In 2000, the Census for the first time provided an option for the population who identified with multiple races, which accounts for a portion of the increase in this component of the population.

The Hispanic/Latino population is increasing in Roanoke County

The portion of the population which identifies themselves as being of Hispanic or Latino ethnicity doubled from 1990 to 2000 in Roanoke County, and nearly doubled again in the 2005-2007 American Community Survey estimates. Despite the rapid rate of increase for this population, people identifying themselves as Hispanic and Latino only make up less than 2% of the population.
